

PEOPLE WHO SAW YOU WHEN YOU WERE BORN

People who saw you when you were born.
The guy in the Light store
The foul of the chained songs,
The twin bikers of the Dynasty Express
(the Chinese restaurant of my dreams)

The drunk man who was a builder one day
And today goes into every pub with his dog
The ones who despair of waiting for the bus
The unbearable neighbour of the first floor

People who saw you when you were born;
People that remember other winters;
People who feel good;
People that have found their gap here.

The grandmother who devote herself to her old days
To bring her grandson at school
The ones that paint graffiti in the open ground
Supporting themselves in a beer and a dissatisfaction

The everlasting craftsman in his workshop
Benigno the suspicious shoemaker
The group of kiddies that study English
A retired who watch a group of builders

People who saw you when you were born;
People that remember other winters;
People who feel good;
People that have found their gap here.

People who saw you when you were born;
People coming from other towns;
People who feel good;
the people of my street that I love.
